

Kirby E. Knox, MD
Medical Acupuncture and Chinese Medicine
5700 Solano Avenue, Richmond, CA. 94805
510-237-1748

11 January 2005

To Whom It Concerns,

My name is Kirby E. Knox. I am a physician, actively licensed in the State of California. I graduated from the University of Miami School of Medicine in May 1977. I practiced general surgery for three years, general medicine for four years, and radiology for twelve years during my twenty three year medical career in the USAF. In 2000, I trained in Chinese Medicine and acupuncture through the University of California School of Medicine in Los Angeles. My current practice is primarily medical acupuncture and Chinese Medicine. I took my first NMT seminar in October of 2004.

Although I have not yet introduced NMT into my personal medical practice (I intend to within the next several weeks), I have witnessed its use on numerous occasions, both in a training setting and in an active medical practice. The cases treated included ADHD (attention deficit hyperactive disorder), food allergies, acute viral infection with otitis media and stomach pain, chronic shoulder pain, chronic low back and hip pain, lateral epicondylitis with muscle trigger points, and repetitive stress injury of the wrist. Each of the cases was treated as taught by use of the NMT seminar manual and the system worked as disclosed. Each case demonstrated immediate improvement, usually in a quite dramatic fashion. Important to note is that in several of the cases, the patient had suffered his/her condition for several years without significant relief from other forms of treatment. The response to properly performed NMT was immediate and lasting.

NMT, as taught by use of the NMT seminar manual, is without doubt, useful in treating patients with a wide variety of disorders. In my twenty eight years in medicine, I have never witnessed, and personally experienced, a more powerful healing modality.

Sincerely,

Kirby E. Knox, MD

App# 10/662,960
Statement # 21